

SEX 101: What Every ~~Child~~ Needs to Know Parent

June 28 - July 1, 2009
6:22 - 8:30 p.m.

Dr. Beth Robinson
Assistant Provost and Graduate
Director of Behavioral Sciences at Lubbock Christian University

Session 1 - Sunday, June 28:

Having the Little Talks

Few parents have role models for how to talk about sex with their children. For many parents, it is easier just not to talk about sexuality at all. This presentation will help parents learn to talk to their children about sexual issues from early childhood through adolescence.

Session 2 - Monday, June 29:

What To Say When

Parents frequently struggle with knowing what to tell their children about sex at what age. As a result, parents often wait too late to talk about sexual issues with their children. This presentation outlines what children should know about sexuality at different ages.

Session 3 - Tuesday, June 30:

Dating and Boundaries

One of the more challenging aspects of parenting is helping adolescents set good boundaries for dating. Too often what we indirectly communicate to teens is that they will know when they have gone too far. This presentation will provide parents with strategies to help teach appropriate boundaries for dating.

Session 4 - Wednesday, July 1:

Sex, Lies, and Selfishness

When parents and churches don't teach children about sexuality, all types of media fill in the information for our children. This presentation will exam what children and adolescents learn from the media in our culture.
